Key Issues

Fiscal and Regency Discipline

Ensuring the board makes budgetary decisions that can be sustained long-term ensuring the university remains stable even in times of turbulent federal educational policies that are wildly unpredictable. Ensure resources aren't committed to unwarranted investigations into fellow regents.

Academic Independence

Promoting and preserving curriculums that uphold academic standards of citing sources and encourage critical thinking. The university's academic direction should never be forced to adhere to the whims of an out of touch federal agency.

Total stakeholder inclusion

The university's direction needs input from all stakeholders, from donors, to academic staff, and especially students. Ensuring meetings are accessible to as many people as possible, while restricting the use of "secret ballots" by regents for routine business promotes transparency and accountability and ultimately fosters a university that people want to attend, work for, and support.
